	the institutional budget supports gender-responsive initiatives. 9. Conduct of training GMEF, HAGADAGA and GPB including the training workshop on GAD Agenda Planning and Formulation
3) Gender-Responsive Curriculum
a. CHEDRO-noted curriculum with gender-related courses, topics, themes	Conducted a Syllabi Making and Harmonization Workshop for departmentalized General Education, mandated, and institutional courses, which ensured the alignment of course content with gender-responsive standards. As a result, a Gender and Society course was developed and institutionalized as a General Education elective. A university-wide standardized syllabus for this course was established, incorporating key gender concepts, equality principles, and social inclusion themes. This initiative supports the submission and recognition of a gender-responsive curriculum aligned with CHED requirements.
b. Conduct of training in gender-responsive curriculum development	Conduct of training in gender-responsive curriculum development. A Curriculum Development Workshop and Syllabi Harmonization Activity were conducted to build the capacity of faculty members in integrating gender perspectives into course design. These activities served as training platforms where instructors were guided on embedding gender concepts, inclusive language, and gender-fair examples into their syllabi and instructional materials.
c. Availability of pertinent learning materials and facilities (library acquisitions)	With the institutionalization of the Gender and Society course, SKSU strengthened its learning resource support by ensuring the availability of gender-related reference materials. These include books, journals, and digital resources focusing on gender studies, women's rights, and social inclusion. In addition, the University has its Instructional Materials Development Center, which produces and develops learning materials that support gender-responsive instruction. Existing facilities such as the university library and learning resource centers further ensure accessible reference materials for both faculty and students.
d. Integration of gender perspectives in NSTP curriculum	Gender perspectives were integrated into the NSTP curriculum through the inclusion of topics such as gender equality, prevention of gender-based violence, respect for diversity, and community gender awareness. NSTP activities and modules were enhanced to reflect gender-responsive approaches, encouraging students to apply gender sensitivity in community engagement and civic responsibilities.

4) Equal Opportunity Principle a. Hiring of administrators/faculty/personnel b. Admission of students	a. Hiring of administrators/faculty/personnel SKSU adheres to the principle of equal opportunity in the hiring of administrators, faculty, and personnel. Recruitment and selection processes are based on merit, qualifications, competence, and experience, regardless of sex, gender identity, age, religion, or other personal characteristics. The institution ensures that employment opportunities are open and accessible to all qualified applicants, promoting a non-discriminatory and gender-fair workplace in accordance with existing civil service and labor standards. b. Admission of students SKSU implements an inclusive and non-discriminatory student admission policy. Admission is based on academic qualifications and established institutional requirements without regard to gender, socio-economic status, religion, or other personal attributes. This ensures equal access to quality higher education opportunities for all qualified applicants, promoting diversity, equity, and inclusivity within the student population.
5) Gender-Responsive Research
a. GAD-related topics and themes for research	Each campus of the University is mandated to develop GAD-related research topics and themes aligned with institutional priorities and CHED GAD mainstreaming policies. These cover key areas such as gender equality, women empowerment, gender-based violence, inclusive education, and social inclusion. In addition, each campus adopts a specific GAD research branding under the "IMPACT" framework, reflecting its identity and focus.
6) Gender-Responsive Extension Programs

a. Inclusion of gender equality in extension programs and activities	Gender equality is integrated in the University's extension programs and activities to ensure inclusive participation and equitable community support. One of these initiatives is the extension program titled "Donate-A-Toy Project," which aims to collect and donate pre-loved toys for the Daycare Centers and Childminding Facilities of the University. This program supports the holistic development of children by providing access to learning and play materials while promoting sharing, inclusivity, and care for all learners regardless of gender.
b. Partnerships with organizations, HEIs	The University maintains active partnerships with various organizations and institutions to strengthen its Gender and Development initiatives. It is in collaboration with the City of Tacurong Council for the Development of Women, the Commission on Human Rights, and the Local Government Unit of Tacurong City, among others. These partnerships support the implementation of gender-responsive programs, capacity-building activities, advocacy campaigns, and policy development initiatives, reinforcing the University's commitment to gender equality and inclusive development.
7) GAD Corner in the HEI or GAD section in the library	The University has established GAD Corners in all campuses and colleges, as well as a dedicated GAD section in the University Library, to promote awareness and accessibility of Gender and Development (GAD) information. These spaces serve as information hubs containing GAD-related materials such as IEC resources, reference books, posters, and policy documents on gender equality, women empowerment, and related advocacies. The GAD Corners and library section support continuous learning, awareness, and advocacy among students, faculty, and staff.
8) Breastfeeding area	The University ensures support for lactating mothers through the provision of designated breastfeeding areas in various colleges across all campuses. In addition, a centralized Breastfeeding Facility is established within the Childminding and Breastfeeding Facility, providing a safe, comfortable, and private space for breastfeeding and expressing milk. These facilities promote maternal health, work-life balance, and gender-responsive support services within the University, in line with its commitment to creating an inclusive and supportive environment for women.

9) Child-minding area	The University has established a Childminding and Breastfeeding Facility that provides free services to the children of both personnel and students. This facility offers a safe, nurturing, and child-friendly environment where children are cared for while their parents are attending to academic or work-related responsibilities.
10) Sex-Disaggregated Data and GAD Database (enrollment, faculty and other personnel, scholars, etc.)	The University regularly collects and maintains Sex-Disaggregated Data (SDD) as part of its GAD Database to support gender-responsive planning and decision-making both for the personnel and the students
11) Sexual Harassment in HEI
a. Constitution and Composition of Committee on Decorum and Investigation (CODI).	The University has an established Committee on Decorum and Investigation (CODI) with a formal composition in accordance with relevant policies and guidelines on handling gender-related cases and administrative complaints. The CODI is constituted with designated members from key offices of the University, ensuring representation from administration, faculty, and personnel sectors. The committee is tasked to receive, investigate, and recommend appropriate actions on cases involving misconduct, including gender-based harassment and related concerns, thereby promoting a safe, respectful, and gender-responsive academic and work environment.
b. Periodic/Regular reports of sexual harassment complaints (filed, investigated and arbitrated)	The University ensures the preparation and submission of periodic and regular reports on sexual harassment complaints , covering cases that are filed, investigated, and resolved. These reports are systematically documented and consolidated through the Committee on Decorum and Investigation (CODI) to ensure proper monitoring and accountability.
	The reporting mechanism supports transparency in the handling of complaints and provides updates on
